

ABSTRACT

Uniformity of light output from an LED printbar is achieved by current sensing or image sensing of auxiliary LEDs on the LED printbar. A photodetector measures the light output from the auxiliary LEDs and a comparator will compare the auxiliary LED data to 5 determine if the entire LED printbar has to be compensated to make the light output more uniform.